The New Communities Program lead agency in Humboldt Park is Bickerdike Redevelopment Corp., an organization founded in 1967 whose mission is “the redevelopment of the West Town, Humboldt Park, Logan Square and Hermosa communities for the benefit of and control by the lower- and moderate-income residents of these areas.” Founded by community organizations, churches and local residents to rebuild the area’s crumbling housing stock, the organization works to simultaneously preserve ethnic and cultural character while improving its service area economically.

Bickerdike has developed 1,006 affordable housing units, of which 145 units are owner-occupied, 692 are rentals and 169 are cooperative housing. The agency’s Humboldt Construction Company employs 15 to 30 area residents through carpentry and general contracting services. Recent developments include the recently constructed 87-unit, $17.6-million Harold Washington Unity Cooperative and the 57-unit, mixed-use La Estancia now under development.

Bickerdike also undertakes leadership development and organizing through its:

- Residents Council, which builds leadership among tenants and community in Bickerdike’s housing developments;
- Youth Council, led by Bickerdike resident youth, which develops leadership through organizing and civic activities;
- Affordable Housing Committee, which advocates for citywide and countywide reforms; and,
- Public Safety Campaign, which focuses on such activities as CAPS participation, resident participation in block parties and safety marches, and police accountability.

A Prosperous and Inclusive Community

Local youth formulated their own vision for the community.

Our neighborhood will be a prosperous, inclusive community in which children are well educated and cared for, adults can find good jobs or start their own businesses, and all enjoy safe streets, dependable public transportation, affordable health care, attractive open space and excellent city services.

We envision a Humboldt Park where:

- Residents feel empowered to improve the quality of life and the physical environment, working hand-in-hand with city officials;
- Adults can find living-wage employment working for—or starting—positive, indigenous businesses that provide needed products and services;
- Children enjoy state-of-the-art schools as well as after-school and summer programs that prepare them for a future as responsible adults;
- The elderly have easy access to senior services and people with disabilities have opportunities for independent living;
- Families of all incomes can afford decent, safe housing;
- Family members are healthy in body, mind and spirit, with adults responsible for themselves and their children;
- Everyone can access culturally sensitive and affordable health care, attractive and safe open space, and dependable public transportation;
- No one is threatened by gangs or crime—or has public safety used against him and her because of class or racial fears; diversity is celebrated; and
- Private and public properties are improved through beautification efforts.

KEY PROJECTS

Neighborhood Creates Plan as New Residents Arrive

East of the park, Puerto Rican flag sculptures span Division Street.

A historic beacon for immigrants and low- to moderate-income residents, Humboldt Park is responding to encroaching gentrification by working furiously to stake a claim for longtime residents who wish to stay.

A mixed community with Puerto Ricans to the east, African-Americans to the west and an increasing influx of Mexican-Americans, Humboldt Park is a well-organized, outspoken, sometimes fiery community that has had mixed reactions to the growing number of higher-income, predominantly white newcomers who attract investment but drive up housing prices and property taxes.

Longtime residents appreciate the positive results that new development can bring, such as safer streets and greater amenities, but want to preserve affordable housing, retain industry and improve education, job training and health care. Unfortunately, industry has declined in recent decades, retail strips have withered and schools have performed poorly, all contributing to the twin plagues of gang and drug activity. But new investments in housing, the commercial strip along Division Street known as Paseo Boricua (Puerto Rican Gateway) and the green expanse of Humboldt Park itself have fostered a sense of renewal.

This plan includes many ideas from earlier plans, notably the Empowerment Zone process in the 1990s led by the Near Northwest Neighborhood Network/Humboldt Park Empowerment Partnership, and plans by West Humboldt Park Family and Community Development Council and Nobel Neighbors. Although implementing this plan will require greater coordination and less attention to “turf” issues among local organizations, all involved realize they must unite—or be conquered.

New Communities Program

NCP is a long-term initiative of Local Initiatives Support Corporation/Chicago to support comprehensive community development in Chicago neighborhoods. It seeks to rejuvenate challenged communities, bolster those in danger of losing ground and preserve the diversity of areas in the path of gentrification. Each effort is led by a neighborhood-based lead agency that coordinates programs among other local organizations and citywide support groups.

The program gives each of the lead agencies several resources: two full-time staff positions (an NCP director and organizer), technical support for planning and documenting the planning process, a pool of loan and grant funds distributed on a competitive basis for project seed money, and opportunities for learning from both peers and subject-area experts.

All NCP neighborhoods spend their first year undertaking a structured community planning process that leads to the quality-of-life plan, then move on to implementation. They are encouraged to be “doing while planning,” undertaking short-term “Early Action Projects” such as launching a youth program, opening an employment center, creating public art or sponsoring local health fairs.

NCP is designed to strengthen communities from within—through planning, organizing and human development. The comprehensive approach is designed to help broaden opportunities for local residents through better education, broader housing choices, safer streets, stronger personal finances and new economic opportunities. The strengthened community is better equipped to take advantage of larger market forces, attract new investment and enhance the overall quality of life.
